Other

- '14 West Bank settler outposts to be legalized, 20 already approved'. According to Peace Now, in the first half of 2016, plans have been advanced to retroactively legalize 314 settler homes. In the last four years Israel has advanced plans to legalize 14 West Bank outposts and has approved 20 such fledgling hilltop communities, Peace Now said in a new report it issued on Monday. It did so, after the Higher Planning Council for Judea and Samaria on July 6, advanced plan to legalize Horesh Yaron. It was first built in 1996 in the Binyamin region of the West Bank, near the Talmon settlement, with NIS 50,000 from the Ministry of Housing and Construction. But it was never given any official permits. It houses an education facility for teenagers and there are additional plans to build a sports center there, said Hagit Ofran of Peace Now. Before Netanyahu took office in 2009, the international community and many left-wing Israelis expected that Israel would remove some 100 illegal fledgling settler communities, known as outposts. But Netanyahu's government shifted that policy to one that sought to authorize such communities when possible, out of a belief that such outposts were not illegal, but rather places that had not yet received authorization. Similarly Netanyahu has also sought to retroactively legalize unauthorized settler homes in existing settlements. According to Peace Now, in the first half of 2016, plans have been advanced to retroactively legalize 314 settler homes. In addition, plans were also advanced for the construction of 1,509 new settler homes, including 503 in Ma'aleh Adumim. The High Planning Council advanced those units under orders from Netanyahu and approved another 28 in that same city, which is the third largest in the West Bank. Separately, last week, under Netanyahu's orders tenders were published for 42 new homes in the West Bank settlement of Kiryat Arba. They are the first tenders for West Bank homes to be published this year. (IPOST 11 July 2016)
